

He was one of my strong supporters when I formed by party and this he did because he knew I was wholly against the philosophy of apartheid. The friendship between me and Mr. Mohaleroe is well known between us; but be that as it may, it cannot be allowed to put the country in a state of insecurity. Professor Gower would be well advised to keep his peace becausee the more he speaks of this the more he makes it difficult for Mr. Mohaleroe to remain in this country.

What Professor Gower has written in The Times is most typical of English people. They have such a great deal to say in the affairs of other people, forgetting that the Rhodesian one is their own and is staring them fiercely in the face.

My advice to Professor Gower is that he should desist having a finger in other people's pie. We in Lesotho are an independent sovereign state capable of making our own decisions in the best interests of our country. All he has written in this article, I dismiss with the contempt it deserves.
